

AGC Webinar

Avoid Being Blindsided by the AIA A201

November 9, 2009 at 1:00 - 2:30 pm EST

Key Topics

- New risks, requirements and restrictions Contractors now face
- Specific possible corrective action to consider (including AGC's Preliminary Commentary on the new AIA A201)
- Explanation of how an architects' and contractors' responsibility and risk exposure are not balanced in the A201
- AGC's attempts to provide balance in the AIA A201 drafting process

Speaker

James Duffy O'Connor, Esq., Past President of the American Bar Association (ABA) Construction Forum and AGC AIA A201 Taskforce Member will be the feature speaker for this webinar.

Mr. O'Connor has spoken throughout the country and written articles in regard to the AIA A201 2007 edition. He will provide unique insights into both the big picture view as well as the specific contractual provisions that will affect your business and risk profile when bidding a project that requires the AIA A201.

The conference will be facilitated by Brian Perlberg, Esq., AGC Senior Counsel for Contracts and Construction Law.

For the first time in more than 50 years, the AIA A201 General Terms and Conditions document was not endorsed by AGC. If using the A201, the 2007 edition is now mandated. The substantial risk shift to Contractors (General and Specialty) and other parties outside the design profession will be addressed.

This webinar will provide valuable information to contractors including:

- Highlight of major concerns and lesser-known potential traps
- Recommendations for revisions
- Comparisons with terms in ConsensusDOCS contracts
