

PABLO MEDINA

Pablo has over a decade working in the AEC industry. He is currently a BIM manager with Turner Construction and is responsible for BIM/VDC and construction technology implementation in the San Diego region. He graduated with a degree in Construction Management from Brigham Young University. He has worked in various roles including property management; assistant superintendent, construction engineering and extensively as a BIM engineer and BIM manager for Turner Construction. He has helped implement BIM in over 1 billion dollars in work involving VDC services. He has International experience and has partnered with Trimble VDC project management and coordination services. He has consulted with universities and with the City of Los Angeles on BIM implementation within their bureau of engineering and building. He has been a BIM guest speaker at many industry events including the 2015 and 2016 BIMforum and the USC BIM symposium. Pablo holds a certificate of management in Building Information Modeling and is a BIM education program instructor with the AGC.