The AGC Build America Marvin M. Black Partnering Award will be presented annually to construction project(s) that epitomize the principles of partnering. The goal of this category is to identify excellence in partnering, honor stakeholders and celebrate success while perpetuating the partnering process.

Those honored with this Build America award stand out for their ability in the following areas:

- Signing a formal partnering charter
- Adherence to the principles of partnering
- Achieving a common goal
- Honoring all stakeholders
- Resolving conflict
- Incorporating team-building activities
- Perpetuating the partnering process
- Team building
- Improved communications
- Conflict resolution
- Delivery of quality to the project
- General and specialty contractors working as the prime contractor must be AGC members in good standing.
- All members of the joint venture must be AGC members in good standing.

“Winning the Alliant Build America Award is an affirmation that our team is performing at a very high level. This award is one of the most prestigious honors in the construction industry and we are very privileged to have been selected.”

THE ALLIANT BUILD AMERICA AWARDS

The Alliant Build America Awards have always showcased the best of construction. Past winners have rebuilt earthquake-damaged highways and bridges, renovated historic structures along "Main Street America," built state-of-the-art stadiums and hospitals, constructed new public works and revitalized aging infrastructure across this great nation. The Alliant Build America Awards also include a "Partnering Excellence" category to recognize those projects best epitomizing the principles of partnering. Inspired by AGC's Past President Marvin M. Black, the inclusion of partnering into the Build America Awards represents a timely and unified celebration of the construction industry's finest. For the 2017 Awards, all entries must be submitted at www.agc.org/awards no later than Friday, October 26, 2016.

The Alliant Build America Awards have tremendous credibility with owners. The recognition of our winning projects has definitely helped open doors and establish Hamilton's reputation in new markets.

Excellent. Safe. Innovative. On-Time. These are words AGC contractors strive to achieve and live by every day. They are the same words your fellow construction leaders use to judge the winners of an Alliant Build America Award. I encourage each member of the AGC to participate, apply and become a part of the Build America Award program. It is a unique and small set of contractors, contractors defined by excellence, safety, and innovation; all qualities we at Alliant also strive to achieve on behalf of our clients. Being acknowledged by your peers with an Alliant Build America Award is a proud moment for your construction firm and your project management teams. When the Award application process starts this summer, please consider submitting an application. Application information is available at www.agc.org/awards. See you next year in Las Vegas.

The AGC Build America Marvin M. Black Partnering Awards are presented to construction projects that epitomize the principles of partnering. The awards celebrate successful partnerships and years of outstanding results from such collaborations. Partners whose projects earn this coveted prize stand out among others for their ability to achieve a common goal, honor all stakeholders, maintain momentum, perpetuate partnering, resolve conflicts, improve communication, celebrate joint successes and most importantly, incorporate team-building activities.

Partnering is the greatest vehicle protecting stakeholders' interests, resolving conflicts and maintaining a highly motivated team throughout the project. The Build America Awards showcase not only the premier projects in the world, but also recognize the partnering process that makes it happen.
